Warsaw, October 15, N. S.

THE King of Poland has held a Court called here Judicium Curlandiæ, for the hearing of Appeals passed in the Courts of that Fœdal Dutchy. The Court has received this Morning a Letter from the Officer they have in Count Munich's Army; in which he says the Russians had retired clear out of the Territories of Poland: That had the Tartars pursued them according to the Seraskier's Orders, their Retreat might have been as fatal as that from Pruth; but those irregular Troops thought that the Turks loaded them with all the Difficulties and Dangers of the Campaign; therefore mutinied, and are supposed to be on their Return to their own Countries. His Majesty was present to Day in the Senate, where the Pacta Conventa, and the Result of the Senatus Consilium held at Frauſtad were read. The Great Chancellor of Poland afterwards made from the Throne a Speech, with four or five Propositions for the Senators to take into Consideration; the chief were relating to the Augmentation of the Army; the Necessity of repairing the Fortresses on the Frontiers; of restoring Immunities to certain Towns; and of better regulating the Exchange of Money.
